

A RIVER DREAMING is closely linked to my own personal story of dislocation from culture and loss of identity. Imagine the relief I felt to discover that "I am an Australian Aboriginal!" Like the Platypus I have struggled! I have decided and I know who I am.

- Elizabeth Pike

An inspiring story about hope in the midst of adversity. It is vitally important to develop new stories that fit our experiences, especially our experiences of dislocation and brokenness, which cause much pain. Stories and parables are like a gentle balm, in which we discover ourselves anew and realise our true belonging.

Professor of Literature, La Trobe University; author of Re-Enchantment: The New Australian Spirituality.

A RIVER DREAMING is a delightful, imaginative book which also contains an important message for all Australians. I can highly recommend it.

- Henry Reynolds

The creation story of the Platypus... is a story that I find particularly moving and touching. I believe that Betty has found her totem and in finding her totem was able to discover other parts and meanings of her amazing life journey.
